The History

In the 1850's, Archibald Russell, a known philanthropist and founder of Ulster County Savings in Kingston, built a home for his family on an estate known as Glen Albyn. Archibald died in 1871 and his widow, Helen, sold the Glen Albyn estate to the Durkee family in 1885. The Durkee's were proprietors of the country's leading spice business and eventually condiment producers still in business to this day. They purchased the property as a wedding gift for their daughter and owned it until it was purchased in the early 1900's by the Christian Brotherhood and for the next 100+ years, the historic estate served as a working monastery.

We are proud to be the 4th owner in over 170 years, and equally proud to introduce, The Hudson House & Distillery. We have committed to restore and maintain the property's natural beauty in keeping with the original Italian Villa Revival style of architecture. We encourage you to explore the old buildings and truly experience this unique and special property in the Hudson Valley.
